Serhat Filiz

Serhat Filiz was born in 1976. He drew his first paintings when he was only three years old. They were the sunset he saw every evening from the balcony of his house and the reflection of the red sun on the sea. As he grew up, his painting talent developed as well as his body and he graduated from the fine arts department at the university. Then he completed his master's degree. He always studied nature, the light of nature and the elements of nature in the places where he lived. He discovered how these elements dance in light and perspective. After a while, he started to draw the combination of the nature he saw and the nature he imagined, and a half-imaginary, half-realistic style emerged. In the late 90s, he was also affected by the technological revolution and started to draw his works in a semi-traditional, semi-digital style. Later, in order to use time economically, he switched to a completely digital style, and he still continues in this way. Serhat Filiz is a sought-after author and illustrator in children's literature. He has written and drawn nearly two hundred books and illustrated more than a thousand books. He is also a bass guitarist and plays blues with his band.

William Morris

William Morris (24 March 1834 - 3 October 1896) was an English poet, designer, novelist, art writer and painter. Morris was also an industrial designer, craftsman and designer who pioneered the Arts and Crafts movement with his furniture, fabric, stained glass and wallpaper designs. He was the founder and owner of the Kelmscott Printing Works. With the tools and furnishings of everyday life that he and his friends designed in the workshop he founded, he inspired the public to consider the aesthetics of everyday objects. Morris's decorations and designs for fabrics, wallpapers and books were highly regarded. "Thanks to William Morris's understanding of organisation in book design, the Kelmscott Printers did a great service in contributing to graphic design and especially book design, and the beauty Morris brought to type design, the fact that he treated even the smallest detail that made up the whole with design integrity, inspired the next generations of book designers.

David Maclean

It has been said that you either become an artist, or you are born one. David Maclean was born one. David, a digital artist for the past 15 years, and a traditional artist for the 25 years previous to that (paint and brush on an easel), currently lives among the vineyards and orchards with his wife of over 30 years, Maryse, and they have 3 grown children. David is represented by one of the worlds leading art licensing agencies (based in London, England), and has quickly become one of the most requested artists over the past year. His artwork can now be found all over the world.

David's mother shares a vivid memory of picking him up after his first day of school, only to take him directly to an art supply store. She had seen what he'd created in class, all bright-eyed and proud, and knew she must help him pursue his talent. Ask her and she will say, "This was his destiny, he was an artist." And so it was.

Yayoi Kusama

Yayoi Kusama is a Japanese artist called "the princess of polka dots". She is interested in many art types such as painting, sculpture, and installation. She was born in Japan in 1929 and she left the school after receiving traditional Japanese formal education for a period, then she moved to New York in 1958. Kusama felt that she could freely pursue her art and create new art waves there. She gave a new direction to her artistic identity by moving to New York in the late 1950s. Yayoi Kusama is an art doyenne who can describe the ongoing chaos in her mind in a wide variety of colorful and original ways. The Yayoi Kusama Museum has been operating in Tokyo since 2017 to spread the development of art and bring together art lovers and her artworks.

Melanie Delon

Freelance illustrator born in August 1980, I live in a small city near Paris. I create illustrations for book covers, I've worked for many publishing houses around the world, concept arts for video game industry and tutorials, work in progress for several magazines specialized in 2d.

In 2007, I published my first artbook "Elixir 1", a collection of illustrations with short stories, followed by the second volume in 2010. The worlds I'm trying to create through my illustrations are fantasy based, my favourite subject, but I always add a touch of classicism and romanticism, mixing styles brings more realism to the painting.

Drawing has always been a huge part in my life, since my childhood. Becoming a professional illustrator was not obvious, it happened quite by mistake and later.

After studying History of Art and Archeology at the Sorbonne, I went to a 3d school where I discovered digital illustration. Photoshop and Painter offer almost total freedom of creation, I love being able at any time to crop, change colors, light, remove or add details.

Abraham Hunter

Abraham Hunter said that he first began to realize that God had given him a talent at 12 years old. At 14, he began to hone his skills and pursue his artistic talent as a career. Over the past 4 years, Abraham has been amazed at how much success he has managed to achieve. He attributes this success to his faith in God and the support of family and friends.

Being self-taught, it was hard at first since there are no wildlife artists in his home area nor did anyone else in his family have any artistic gifts. But by studying nature first hand, and using reference photos, Abraham was able to improve without any tutoring at all.

Abraham works in oil, acrylic and occasionally watercolor and strives for extreme photorealism most of the time because he feels it properly honors God's handiwork by showing all the intricate details. He often portrays somewhat "utopia" like scenes because he likes to imagine what it would have been like in the Garden of Eden and wants his viewers to have an encounter with a world lacking of death and turmoil. "I think we get far more fulfillment from that rather than the intense drama of life and death, predator and prey, which we struggle through here on earth."

If there is one thing I want to capture in my work and be able to share it with my collectors, it would be the abundance and beauty that I enjoy from a close relationship with Jesus Christ and an awe for His marvelous creation.

"When someone looks at my paintings, I want them to feel as if they are right there witnessing first hand what the scene is depicting. I want them to feel the peace, comfort and joy that I experience when I'm studying the outdoors. I also want it to be a time for them to reflect on the beauty of God's many blessings that seem to go mostly unnoticed in our busy world."

Joseph Glasco

Joseph Glasco was born in Paul's Valley, Oklahoma and raised in Texas. Following his first one-man exhibition in New York in 1949, Glasco became the youngest artist at that time represented in the permanent collection of the Museum of Modern Art.

Glasco's rhythmic, thoroughly abstract compositions have often been associated with those of American artist Jackson Pollock. In the 1950s, Glasco became friends with Pollock; The two seemed to have an affinity for the element of chance in their work. In the late 1970s, Glasco created his first collaged canvases. These were made from irregular pieces of canvas painted and pasted chaotically onto an underlying abstract painting. According to Glasco, "... There is a need within me to sculpt, and this somehow comes out when I paint, when I use material on material. ... That's what sculpture is about."

Glasco's paintings and sculptures were exhibited widely in New York museums and galleries from the 1950s to the 1970s and ranged from stylized figures to completely abstract images.

Wassily Kandinsky

Wassily Kandinsky was a Russian painter and art theorist who lived between 1866 and 1944. Known as the pioneer of abstract art, especially in Europe, Kandinsky also attracted attention with the art movements he introduced. The life of the famous painter is full of many turning points and breaking moments. He first studied law and economics at Moscow University, and then was greatly influenced by a trip he took to Europe.

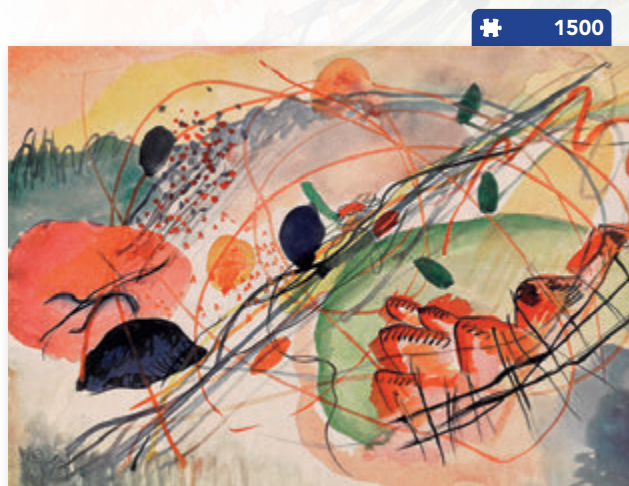

Wassily Kandinsky, who specialized in the field he studied and received many offers, including a professorship at Dorpat University, chose to display his talents in painting. His painting life, which he started at the age of 30, transformed after he graduated from the Grekov Odessa Art School, and another turning point occurred when he moved to Munich. The painter, who speaks German fluently, managed to make a name for himself by being included in the Munich art circles.
